Executive Summary

1. Combating fraud and corruption in the United Nations Secretariat is a primary responsibility of staff, including management, and other United Nations Secretariat personnel, and is a responsibility the Secretariat also applies to its relationship with third parties.
2. The Secretariat has a zero-tolerance approach to fraud and corruption involving its staff members, other personnel and third parties in relation to their work with the Secretariat. This means all allegations of Fraudulent Acts committed by any individual or entity involved in a contractual relationship with the Organization will be vigorously pursued.
3. “Fraudulent Acts” include both “Fraud” and “Corruption.” Fraud encompasses any act or omission whereby an individual or entity knowingly misrepresents or conceals a material fact, in order to obtain an undue benefit or advantage for himself, herself, itself or a third party, or to cause another to act to his or her detriment. Corruption encompasses any act or omission that misuses official authority or that seeks to influence the misuse of official authority, in order to obtain an undue benefit for oneself or a third party.
4. Fraudulent Acts are considered misconduct. In the case of staff members, these acts will lead to disciplinary measures that may range from a written censure to dismissal. Other measures may include financial recovery of losses to the Organization and referral of credible allegations of criminal wrongdoing to national authorities, when appropriate. Other United Nations personnel may also be the subject of sanctions for this type of misconduct as defined under this framework.
5. Staff members – and other United Nations personnel – have the duty to report any and all possible cases of Fraudulent Acts either to the Head of Office/Mission or responsible officer, the Assistant Secretary-General of Human Resources, or the Office of Internal Oversight Services (“OIOS”). OIOS has a dedicated hotline where cases may be reported in a confidential manner:
<https://oios.un.org/page?slug=reporting-wrongdoing>.
6. The United Nations Secretariat is obliged to protect the confidentiality of those reporting alleged cases of Fraudulent Acts. A protection against retaliation policy protects staff members, interns, and United Nations volunteers against retaliation as a consequence of reporting misconduct. Other United Nations personnel should adhere to the provisions of their respective contracts in this respect.
7. OIOS is the main entity typically responsible for conducting investigations of high-risk cases involving complex matters and/or serious criminal cases, including serious or complex fraud. Lower-risk cases are typically handled by programme managers or other dedicated investigative bodies.
8. The Secretariat reports to Member States on all cases of fraud through reports to the General Assembly and the United Nations Board of Auditors. OIOS in its reports references specific investigations of possible misconduct including Fraudulent Acts. In addition, the Secretariat reports cases of misconduct and/or criminal behaviour, and the related disciplinary consequences on a yearly basis, as well as cases involving credible allegations of criminal conduct against United Nations’ officials and experts on mission which have been referred to their states of nationality.

I. Introduction

1. The Charter of the United Nations states that the “paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity...” (Article 101). The promotion and maintenance of a culture of integrity and honesty is a basic requirement for combating fraud and corruption and a primary responsibility of staff, including management, in the United Nations Secretariat.
2. The United Nations Secretariat has a zero-tolerance approach to fraud and corruption involving its staff members, other personnel or third parties in relation to their work with the Secretariat. “Zero-tolerance” means that the Secretariat will pursue all allegations of Fraudulent Acts involving any individual or entity covered by the regulations, rules, administrative issuances, policies, procedures and agreements described in this framework and that appropriate administrative/disciplinary measures or contractual remedies will be applied if wrongdoing is established. In addition, certain matters involving credible allegations of criminal wrongdoing may be referred to national authorities when appropriate.

II. Purpose

3. The purpose of this framework is to assist the Secretariat in promoting a culture of integrity and honesty within the Organization by providing guidance and information to staff members and other United Nations Secretariat Personnel² on how the Secretariat acts to prevent, detect, deter, respond to and report on fraud and corruption. Other United Nations Secretariat Personnel include Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission, Individual Contractors, Consultants, interns, Gratis Personnel, Participants in Advisory Meetings, “When Actually Employed” personnel, and United Nations Volunteers. The framework describes the Organization’s existing regulations, rules, administrative issuances, policies and procedures in these areas, including roles and responsibilities of personnel and the applicable sanctions³. In addition, this framework refers to third parties, who are obliged to comply with all obligations related to Fraudulent Acts that are included in their applicable agreements with the United Nations Secretariat.
4. This framework should be read in conjunction with the documents and provisions referenced in Annex I – “Relevant sections of United Nations’ official documentation related to Fraudulent Acts”, Annex II – “List of important treaties, instruments, regulations, rules, administrative issuances, policies and manuals governing Fraudulent Acts in the United Nations”; and Annex III – “Categories of non-United Nations personnel not covered by this framework.”

² This category does not include: United Nations Military Experts on Mission, including Military Observers, Military Advisors and Military Liaison Officers; United Nations Police Officers; members of Formed Police Units; Government-Provided Personnel; and Contingent personnel. Information related to these categories of non-United Nations personnel is included in Annex III of this framework.

³ See in particular A/64/640 “Towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat”

III. Definitions

5. For the purpose of this framework, the term “Fraudulent Acts” in the United Nations Secretariat is intended to include both “Fraud”, which encompasses any act or omission whereby an individual or entity knowingly misrepresents or conceals a material fact in order to obtain an undue benefit or advantage for himself, herself, itself, or a third party, or to cause another to act to his or her detriment; and “Corruption”, which encompasses any act or omission that misuses official authority or that seeks to influence the misuse of official authority in order to obtain an undue benefit for oneself or a third party.
6. Examples of Fraudulent Acts may include, but are not limited to, the following acts, which are listed below for illustrative purposes⁴:
 - a) submitting falsified documentation;
 - b) improperly creating and using a document that purportedly authorizes a staff member or a third party to remove property belonging to the Organization;
 - c) misrepresenting educational qualifications;
 - d) making material omissions or false inclusions in Personal History Profiles (PHPs);
 - e) knowingly submitting an education grant, medical, travel or other entitlement claim and documentation containing false information;
 - f) knowingly including false information in movement-related documentation submitted to the Organization;
 - g) declaring private telecommunications charges as official;
 - h) improperly assisting a person external to the Organization to secure UN employment in exchange for money or other favours;
 - i) improperly assisting a vendor in a procurement process;
 - j) manipulating a procurement or recruitment process to ensure a certain outcome;
 - k) misusing United Nations resources to benefit oneself or a third party;
 - l) soliciting or accepting bribes;
 - m) revealing internal confidential information in order to obtain a benefit for oneself or a third party;
 - n) participating in the recruitment process of a family member or a person with whom one has an undisclosed conflict of interest;
 - o) participating in a procurement and/or contract management process involving a person or entity with whom/which one has an undisclosed conflict of interest;
 - p) manipulating administrative processes to disburse payments to benefit oneself or a third party, such as by creating fake contracts, fake third party beneficiaries or ghost employees;
 - q) improperly altering the labelling on the salary envelopes of individual contractors and removing cash from the envelopes, all without authorization;
 - r) Taking property of the United Nations Secretariat without authorization.

⁴ Additional examples more specifically related to “third parties” are included in Section X, paragraph 61 below.

7. Established “Fraudulent Acts” in the United Nations Secretariat are considered to be “misconduct”, and Article X of the Staff Regulations and Staff Rules, (Disciplinary measures), and Staff Rules 10.1 and 10.2 clearly state the actions that the Secretariat takes for staff who engage in this type of behaviour. In addition, sections IX and X of this framework clearly define the actions that are taken in the cases of Other United Nations Secretariat Personnel and Third Parties (including Implementing Partners, Vendors and Non-state Donors).

IV. Scope

8. This framework is applicable to Fraudulent Acts throughout the United Nations Secretariat, which includes Peacekeeping Missions and Special Political Missions. The roles of particular actors within the Secretariat are summarised below:
 - a) The Secretary-General, as the Chief Administrative Officer of the United Nations, is ultimately accountable for the establishment and management of an effective system for the prevention and detection of, as well as enforcement of measures against, Fraudulent Acts; the response to allegations of Fraudulent Acts; and for the effectiveness of the system of related internal controls in this regard within the United Nations⁵.
 - b) Heads of Departments/Offices and Programme Managers are accountable to the Secretary-General and have the delegated responsibility for ensuring that the existing internal control system, including all measures aimed at preventing and detecting Fraudulent Acts, is functioning effectively; that all measures aimed at preventing and detecting Fraudulent Acts are put in place; and that an appropriate and robust internal control environment is maintained, including those components related to integrity and ethical values, compliance requirements and disclosure. The Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management is responsible for reviewing and updating this framework as required.
 - c) All staff members are expected to be aware that Fraudulent Acts, whatever their extent and form, are contrary to the standards of conduct expected of international civil servants and, if established, constitute misconduct as provided for in Staff Rule 10.1 of Chapter X (Disciplinary measures) of the Staff Regulations and Rules for which a staff member may be sanctioned, and even dismissed (Staff Regulation 10.1 and Staff Rule 10.2). In addition, pursuant to Staff Rule 1.2(c), staff members have the duty to report cases of suspected misconduct, including suspected Fraudulent Acts, either to a Head of Department/Office, the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management⁶ or to the Office of Internal Oversight Services (“OIOS”).

- d) Other categories of United Nations Secretariat personnel⁷ are governed by the respective applicable provisions, in particular consultants and individual contractors⁸, interns⁹, United Nations Volunteers under the applicable rules of the United Nations Development Programme¹⁰, and Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission¹¹, gratis personnel¹², participants in advisory meetings¹³, personnel on non-reimbursable loans from sources external to the United Nations Common System¹⁴, and “When Actually Employed personnel”¹⁵.
- e) The four internal and external oversight bodies that cover the United Nations Secretariat are: OIOS, the Board of Auditors (“BOA”), the Joint Inspection Unit (“JIU”) and the Independent Audit Advisory Committee (“IAAC”). These bodies have been established by the General Assembly to assist in promoting a culture of compliance and integrity and in deterring Fraudulent Acts by independently assessing the adequacy and effectiveness of the internal control systems, and in the case of OIOS, for undertaking investigations into possible cases of Fraudulent Acts, as appropriate.

V. Prevention Measures for Fraudulent Acts

- 9. The Organization has established a comprehensive framework of measures to prevent cases of Fraudulent Acts, as listed below.

1. Standards of Conduct

- 10. All United Nations staff members must uphold the standards of conduct that are prescribed, in particular in the Charter of the United Nations, the Staff Regulations and Rules and the relevant administrative issuances as listed in Annex I.¹⁶ Under Article 100 of the Charter, the staff “shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.”
- 11. Under Staff Regulation 1.1, staff members must make a written declaration, inter alia, that they will exercise “in all loyalty, discretion and conscience” the functions entrusted to them as international civil servants of the United Nations, to discharge those functions and regulate their conduct “with the interests of the United Nations only in view” and to respect the obligations incumbent upon them as set out in the Staff Regulations and Rules.

12. Under Staff Regulation 1.2, staff members must uphold the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. It is specified that “the concept of integrity includes, but is not limited to, probity, impartiality, fairness, honesty and truthfulness in all matters affecting their work and status.” Moreover, Staff Regulation 1.2 (g) provides that staff members “shall not use their office or knowledge gained from their official functions for private gain, financial or otherwise, or for the private gain of any third party, including family, friends and those they favour. Nor shall staff members use their office for personal reasons to prejudice the positions of those they do not favour”.
13. Standards of conduct are repeated and explained further in the Staff Rules¹⁷ and in the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of United Nations staff members¹⁸. Staff shall also be guided by the International Civil Service Commission’s (“ICSC”) Standards of Conduct for the International Civil Service¹⁹.
14. Similar high standards of conduct are required of other United Nations personnel as outlined in the Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission²⁰ or in the applicable administrative issuances (see paragraph 8(d), above) and provisions contained in their respective contracts.
15. Standards of conduct for other United Nations Secretariat personnel and third parties are set forth in their respective contracts.

2. Protection against Retaliation

16. The Secretary-General issued a specific administrative issuance prohibiting retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with duly authorized audits or investigations²¹. It sets forth protective measures for staff members, interns and United Nations Volunteers under threat of, or experiencing, retaliation for duly reporting misconduct, or for cooperating with duly authorized audits or investigations. The protective measures may include measures to safeguard the interests of the complainant pending the completion of the investigation, such as temporary suspension of the implementation of the action reported as retaliatory and temporary reassignment of the complainant.²² If the Ethics Office finds that there is a credible case of retaliation or threat of retaliation, it will refer the matter in writing to OIOS for investigation and immediately notify the complainant in writing of that referral. All complaints are handled according to specific procedures which ensure confidentiality and prompt and proper attention.

17. Any retaliatory measures by a United Nations staff member against a contractor or their employees, agents or representatives, or any other individual dealing with the United Nations, as a result of that person reporting misconduct by a United Nations staff member, will likewise be considered misconduct that, if established, will lead to disciplinary or other appropriate action.
18. The United Nations Secretariat is obliged to protect the confidentiality of the individual's identity and all communications related to misconduct that have been made through the channels established in paragraph 16 of this framework to the maximum extent possible.²³

3. Risk Management

19. Enterprise Risk Management is a comprehensive process designed to identify, assess, and respond to risks, including Fraudulent Acts, which could affect the ability of the Secretariat to effectively achieve its mandates and objectives.
20. Whilst ultimate responsibility for effective risk and internal control management within the Secretariat resides with the Secretary-General, every manager in the Secretariat is responsible for identifying and mitigating the risks that might affect the operations under his/her responsibility. Systematic fraud risk assessments should be undertaken in accordance with the United Nations Secretariat's Enterprise Risk Management and Internal Control Policy and Methodology²⁴. Such analysis should include known fraud risk factors, potential fraud schemes, control gaps, red flag identification and mapping. Technical advice to implement Enterprise Risk Management is available in the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management.

4. Internal Control System

21. The United Nations internal control system²⁵ is comprised of regulations, rules, administrative issuances, policies, processes and procedures of the Secretariat which staff members are obliged to respect and is designed to provide assurance regarding the achievement of organizational objectives, adequate resource utilization, reliable financial reporting, compliance with relevant regulations, rules and policies, including preventing and detecting fraudulent acts. The system includes, but is not limited to:

- A. The regulations, rules and administrative issuances of the Secretariat which include:

²³ Section 3 of ST/SGB/2005/21 "Reporting misconduct through established internal mechanisms": the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management, the head of department or office concerned or the focal point appointed to receive reports of sexual exploitation and abuse.

The Staff Regulations containing the fundamental conditions of service and the basic rights, duties and obligations of the staff members of the United Nations Secretariat²⁶, and the Staff Rules²⁷ providing further explanation of the Staff Regulations on matters related to staff rights, obligations, duties and conditions of service.
 - ii. The Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials Other than Secretariat Officials, and Experts on Mission.²⁸
 - iii. The Financial Regulations and Rules containing the procedures for financial management of the Organization.²⁹
 - iv. The Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation that govern the cycle of strategic planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation of all activities undertaken by the United Nations, irrespective of the source of financing.³⁰
 - v. Relevant Administrative Instructions containing further policies and procedures on the implementation of the regulations and rules, including those applicable to fraud and corruption.³¹
- B. Manuals and guidelines which provide information and guidance, and include:
- i. The Human Resources Handbook³², Budget and Finance³³ and Procurement Manuals³⁴ containing information on relevant rules, administrative issuances, forms and other documents.
 - ii. Policy memoranda and Standard Operating Procedures, including, but not limited to, those listed in Annex II to this framework.
- C. The systems that assist in effective recruitment and discharge of duties in the Secretariat, including:

- i. The systems for selecting staff members³⁵ and contracting consultants and individual contractors³⁶.
 - ii. The systems for delegation of authority and segregation of duties (covering finance, human resources, procurement and information technology) aimed at strengthening internal controls by ensuring that a single individual does not control all phases of a decision or transaction involving Organizational resources.
- D. The internal justice system which seeks to assist in efforts to enhance accountability, and consists of two pillars of dispute settlement mechanisms – informal and formal: the Office of the Ombudsman³⁷ is central to the informal system. The Management Evaluation Unit (MEU)³⁸ and Administration of Justice system are essential parts of the formal system. The latter comprises two levels of independent judicial review – the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. Relevant legislation includes the statute and rules of both tribunals³⁹.
- E. The four internal and external oversight bodies that cover the United Nations Secretariat are described in Section IV, paragraph 8(e) above. Of these four, OIOS is the main internal body which conducts investigations in the United Nations Secretariat. OIOS has established a mechanism to enable allegations to be reported directly to it at: <https://oios.un.org/page?slug=reporting-wrongdoing>. OIOS is typically responsible for investigating serious misconduct, including serious or complex Fraudulent Acts.⁴⁰

5. Fraud and Corruption Awareness Programme

22. To ensure that the risk of fraud and corruption is effectively mitigated, the United Nations Secretariat implements a communications campaign to raise awareness about Fraudulent Acts and their prevention. The Ethics Office promotes an anti-fraud/corruption culture by fostering an organisational culture of integrity, transparency and accountability, providing confidential ethics advice to all staff, including managers, on appropriate standards of conduct, and including fraud and corruption awareness components in its ethics training programmes.

23. In addition, the United Nations intranet site provides information related to the prevention of Fraudulent Acts including common or frequently asked questions and answers, hotlines, training materials, and relevant documentation such as the Organization's administrative instructions and Secretary-General bulletins. All staff members are encouraged to visit the intranet site and familiarize themselves with its contents.
24. All staff members are expected to complete the mandatory on-line anti-fraud training, when available.

6. Prevention of Conflicts of Interest

25. As stated in Staff Regulation 1.2 (m), a conflict of interest occurs when a staff member's personal interests interfere with the performance of his or her official duties and responsibilities or with the integrity, independence and impartiality required by the staff member's status as an international civil servant. When an actual or possible conflict of interest does arise (please refer to examples in Section III, paragraphs 6 (o) and 6 (p) above), the conflict shall in the first instance be disclosed by the staff member to their head of office, mitigated by the Organization and resolved in favour of the interests of the Organization.
26. Staff Regulation 1.2 (n) further establishes that all staff members at the D-1 level and above shall be required to file financial disclosure statements⁴¹ on appointment and at intervals thereafter, as prescribed by the Secretary-General, in respect of themselves, their spouses and their dependent children, and to assist the Secretary-General in verifying the accuracy of the information submitted when so requested. The same obligation to file financial disclosure statements is imposed on certain categories of other staff including those designated by their heads of department/office by a subsequent administrative issuance⁴².

VI. Reporting Fraudulent Acts

27. Staff Rule 1.2 (c) states⁴³:

"Staff members have the duty to report any breach of the Organization's regulations and rules to the officials whose responsibility it is to take appropriate action... ”

28. Fraudulent Acts constitute a violation of the Staff Regulations and Rules and relevant administrative issuances and, as a result, under Staff Rule 1.2(c), any staff member with information regarding possible wrongdoing in this regard that involves United Nations property, assets, personnel or third parties, is obliged to report the matter either to the Head of Office/Mission or responsible officer⁴⁴, the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management⁴⁵, or OIOS. OIOS can provide advice on potential Fraudulent Acts, and receive reports in a confidential manner through the dedicated hotline, accessible at: <https://oios.un.org/page?slug=reporting-wrongdoing>.
29. As noted above, the Secretariat has an established protection against retaliation policy regarding the protection of staff members, interns, and United Nations Volunteers who allege that they have been subjected to retaliation as a consequence of reporting misconduct⁴⁶. Other United Nations personnel should adhere to the provisions of their respective contracts in this regard.
30. United Nations Military Experts on Mission, including Military Observers, Military Advisors and Military Liaison Officers; United Nations Police Officers; members of Formed Police Units; Government-Provided Personnel; and Contingent personnel, whose information is included as Annex III, are not considered United Nations Personnel. They are subject to the investigation and disciplinary authorities and procedures of the contributing Member State. Nonetheless, any staff member with information regarding any possible misconduct involving this category of non-United Nations Personnel is obliged to report the matter either to the Head of Office/Mission or a responsible officer⁴⁷, or Conduct and Discipline Teams⁴⁸, or OIOS.⁴⁹ The United Nations, for its part, is obliged to report, without delay, alleged misconduct, including Fraudulent Acts, by national contingent members to their respective governments.

⁴⁶ The United Nations Secretariat has an established protection against retaliation policy applicable to staff members, interns, and United Nations Volunteers who allege that they have been subjected to retaliation or the threat of retaliation as a consequence of reporting misconduct, or cooperating with a duly authorized audit or investigation (ST/SGB/2005/21). Protection against retaliation requests are to be filed with the Ethics Office. If the Ethics Office determines a prima facie case of retaliation, it will refer the matter to OIOS for investigation. The policy provides for interim and final retaliation protection measures, and further prohibits retaliation against contractors or other third parties that report misconduct by UN staff members (further information about this policy may be found in the Annex).

⁴⁷ ST/AI/371 “Revised Disciplinary Measures and Procedures”.

VII. Investigations of Allegations involving United Nations Staff

31. Staff rule 1.2(c) “Basic rights and obligations of staff” establishes:

“Staff members have the duty to report any breach of the Organization’s regulations and rules to the officials whose responsibility it is to take appropriate action and to cooperate with duly authorized audits and investigations. Staff members shall not be retaliated against for complying with these duties.”

32. All allegations of misconduct – including Fraudulent Acts – are reviewed and investigated, as appropriate, by the United Nations Secretariat. As stated by ST/AI/371 and Amendment ⁵⁰, heads of offices/missions or responsible officers are obliged to undertake investigations where there is reason to believe that a staff member has engaged in possible misconduct for which a disciplinary measure may be imposed.
33. OIOS will typically conduct all investigations considered as high-risk, complex matters and serious criminal cases, including serious or complex Fraudulent Acts.⁵¹

VIII. Actions based on Investigations of Allegations involving United Nations Staff

34. The United Nations Secretariat takes appropriate action (disciplinary/administrative and/or referral to national authorities) against staff members based on the results of investigations into alleged misconduct.
35. Article X of the Staff Regulations and Staff Rules, “Disciplinary measures”, states in Regulation 10.1(a) the following: “The Secretary-General may impose disciplinary measures on staff members who engage in misconduct.”
36. Staff Rule 10.1(a), “Misconduct”, states that: “Failure by a staff member to comply with his or her obligations under the Charter of the United Nations, the Staff Regulations and Staff Rules or other relevant administrative issuances or to observe the standards of conduct expected of an international civil servant may amount to misconduct and may lead to the institution of a disciplinary

⁵⁰ Currently under revision

“Category II” cases are described as being of lower risk to the organization, including the following: personnel matters, traffic-related inquiries, simple thefts, contract disputes, office management disputes, basic misuse of equipment or staff, basic mismanagement issues, infractions of regulations, rules or administrative issuances and simple entitlement fraud. Such cases can be handled by programme managers. If, however, there is an indication that the case might involve possible illegal activity and the use of trained professional investigators is considered essential, then the case should be handled by OIOS. Where programme managers are entrusted to conduct investigations, the results of their investigations should be reported to OIOS (A/RES/59/287).

“Category I” cases are classified as high-risk, complex matters and serious criminal cases, including the following: serious or complex fraud, other serious criminal act or activity, abuse of authority or staff, conflict of interest, gross mismanagement, waste of substantial resources, cases involving risk of loss of life to staff or to others, substantial violation of UN regulations, rules or administrative issuances. Such cases should be brought to the attention of, and investigated by, OIOS.

process and the imposition of disciplinary measures for misconduct.”

37. Rule 101.2 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations provides that “[a]ll United Nations staff are obligated to comply with the Financial Regulations and Rules and with administrative instructions issued in connection with those Regulations and Rules. Any staff member who contravenes the Financial Regulations and Rules or corresponding administrative instructions may be held personally accountable and financially liable for his or her actions.”
38. Possible disciplinary measures range from a written censure to dismissal. Other measures may include financial recovery of losses to the Organization and referral of credible allegations of criminal wrongdoing to national authorities, when appropriate.
39. In addition, General Assembly resolution 62/63 on “Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission”, as well as subsequent resolutions on the same topic, request that, where credible allegations reveal that a crime may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission, they must be referred by the Secretary-General to the attention of the States against whose nationals such allegations are made. In addition, those States should provide an indication of the status of their efforts to investigate and, as appropriate, prosecute crimes of a serious nature, as well as the types of appropriate assistance States may wish to receive from the Secretariat for the purposes of such investigations and prosecutions.
40. In accordance with Article 45bis of the Regulations, Rules and Pension Adjustment System of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (“UNJSPF”), in cases where a UNJSPF participant is the subject of a criminal conviction by a competent national court for fraud against the United Nations, the UNJSPF may, upon request of a United Nations member organization, remit to the respective United Nations member organization a portion of the pension benefit payable to the participant.

IX. Investigation of Allegations involving other United Nations Secretariat Personnel

41. Other United Nations Secretariat personnel are governed by the respective applicable administrative issuances, in particular Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission,⁵² consultants and individual contractors⁵³, interns⁵⁴ and United Nations Volunteers under the applicable rules of the United Nations Development Programme.

⁵² Experts on mission include, e.g. United Nations Police Officers, members of Formed Police Units, Corrections Officers and Military Observers. (see ST/SGB/2002/9 “Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials Other than Secretariat Officials, and Experts on Mission”).

⁵³ ST/AI/2013/4 “Consultants and individual contractors”

⁵⁴ ST/AI/2014/1 “United Nations internship programme”

42. Cases of possible misconduct - including Fraudulent Acts - regarding these categories of personnel should be reported to either the head of office/mission⁵⁵/responsible official, the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management⁵⁶, or OIOS, and be investigated as appropriate, in accordance with applicable procedures.
43. In the case of Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission, their status, basic rights and duties are established in the “Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials Other than Secretariat Officials, and Experts on Mission”⁵⁷. These regulations establish among other principles their standards of conduct and who they are accountable to. These officials may also be subject to applicable provisions established in their respective contracts.
44. In addition, the obligations described in Section VIII, paragraph 39 above in relation to General Assembly resolution 62/63 on “Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission” apply to United Nations experts on mission.
45. Special Representatives, Envoys and Other Special High Level Positions may be contracted by the Organization on Short-term appointments or other types of contracts⁵⁸, and on a “When Actually Employed” basis. In the case of short term appointments, the oath of office shall be attached to their letter of appointment for signature by the holder. The oath of office states that, as a staff member, he or she is subject to the United Nations Staff Regulations and Rules during the days of his or her service with all the rights, obligations and accountability measures that this entails. In the case of other types of contracts the conditions of service are stated in the paragraph below.
46. Other personnel can be contracted with Special Service Agreements, also on a “When Actually Employed” basis. Their conditions of service are set out in the contract document and the provisions of administrative instructions related to consultants and individual contractors.⁵⁹ In addition, if the concerned individual also has the status of expert on mission, he/she will also be subject to the “Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials other than Secretariat Officials, and Experts on Mission officials”.
47. Finally, the provisions of the Secretary-General’s bulletin that governs the use of “When Actually Employed” contracts for Special Representatives, Envoys and Other Special High Level Positions⁶⁰ apply to Short-Term appointments or other types of contracts as applicable.

⁵⁸ Contract for the Services of a Consultant or Individual Contractor

⁵⁹ ST/AI/2013/4 “Consultants and individual Contractors”

⁶⁰ ST/SGB/283 “Use of “When Actually Employed” Contracts for Special Representatives, Envoys and other Special High-Level Positions”

48. With respect to Consultants and Individual Contractors, their duties, obligations and system of sanctions are defined by the Administrative Instruction that governs the contracting of Consultants and Individual Contractors in the United Nations Secretariat⁶¹ and the General Conditions of Contracts for the Services of Consultants and Individual Contractors that apply to this category of personnel and that are incorporated into their individual contracts.
49. In the case of Gratis personnel⁶² the Standards of conduct and accountability measures they are subject to are established in sections 11 and 12 of the Administrative Instruction that governs their relationship with the Secretariat.⁶³
50. In the case of participants in advisory meetings, their terms and conditions are set out in Section 2 of the Administrative Instruction that governs the relationship of the Secretariat with this type of other United Nations personnel.⁶⁴
51. In the case of United Nations Volunteers, the basic terms of their conditions of service, as well as their duties and obligations, including those related to misconduct and disciplinary procedures, are established in the document “Conditions of Service for International United Nations Volunteers” and the Memorandum of Understanding between the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the United Nations Volunteers.
52. In the case of Interns, their responsibilities, obligations and systems of sanctions are established in the Administrative Instruction that establishes the conditions and procedures for the selection and engagement of interns at the United Nations⁶⁵, as well as in the internship agreement that governs their contractual relation with the United Nations.
53. All of these categories of other United Nations Secretariat Personnel are required to cooperate fully with OIOS or other mandated investigations.

X. Third Parties (including Vendors, Non-state Donors and Implementing Partners)

54. The Secretariat recognizes that, generally, to legally bind a third party to comply with certain obligations, such obligations need to be included in a contractually binding document between the United Nations and that third party. In this connection, in the case of vendors, the United Nations General

⁶¹ ST/AI/2013/4 “Consultants and individual Contractors”

⁶² “Gratis Personnel” refers to personnel provided to the United Nations by a Government or other entity responsible for the remuneration of the services of such personnel and do not serve under any other established regime such as that applicable to interns, associate experts, personnel provided on a non-reimbursable loan under the provisions of ST/AI/231/Rev.1 and personnel provided to the United Nations Special Commission under the regime reported by the Secretary-General to the Security Council in document S/22508 of 18 April 1991 (please refer to ST/AI/1999/6).

⁶³ ST/AI/1999/6 “Gratis Personnel”

⁶⁴ ST/AI/2013/5 “Participants in advisory meetings”

⁶⁵ ST/AI/2014/1 “United Nations internship programme”

Conditions of Contract, which are to be included as part of all procurement contracts for goods and/or services entered into by the United Nations Secretariat, contain provisions intended to deter and address Fraudulent Acts. For example, the “Observance of the Law” clause requires contractors to comply with all relevant laws regarding their performance of the contract, and includes an express provision requiring contractors to maintain compliance with all obligations relating to their registration as a qualified vendor of goods or services to the United Nations, as set forth in the United Nations vendor registration procedures; the “Officials not to Benefit” clause requires contractors to warrant that they have not, and shall not, offer any United Nations representative, official, employee or agent, a benefit related to the contract, any other contract with the United Nations, the award of such contracts, or for any other purpose intended to gain an advantage for the contractor; the “Audits and Investigations” clause includes an obligation on contractors to cooperate with investigations/audits; and the “Responsibility for Employees” clause includes a requirement that contractors’ personnel respect local laws and conform to a high standard of moral and ethical conduct.

55. The United Nations awards contracts to vendors registered with the United Nations Secretariat. Vendors seeking to register with the United Nations Secretariat must, as part of the vendor registration process, declare that they meet certain pre-requisites. In addition, vendors are informed that non-adherence to the principles set forth in the United Nations Supplier Code of Conduct, which, inter alia, describes the Organization’s anti-corruption policies, will be a factor in considering their eligibility to be registered as a United Nations supplier or to do business with the United Nations.
56. Chapter 4 of the United Nations Secretariat’s Procurement Manual (“Ethical Standards in United Nations Procurement”) describes the ethical standards and responsibilities expected in United Nations procurement, and includes information regarding corrupt, fraudulent and unethical practices (chapter 4.10).
57. Chapter 7 of the United Nations Secretariat’s Procurement Manual (“Vendor Registration and Management”) describes the Vendor Review Committee, which is an internal review body that reviews and renders advice to the Assistant Secretary-General for Central Support Services on vendor registration status, including the suspension or removal of vendors from the “Register of Vendors”. Upon receipt of recommendations from the Vendor Review Committee, the Assistant Secretary-General for Central Support Services decides on any changes to a vendor’s registration status, including suspension or removal from the “Register of Vendors”. Vendors are notified of such a decision and are informed that they may request review of the UN’s decision.
58. In the case of Non-State donors⁶⁶ and implementing partners, the Secretariat’s Departments and Offices should ensure that adequate due diligence is carried out prior to engaging in a contractual relationship with them. They are expected to use resources efficiently and for the intended purpose, and refrain from, prevent and mitigate all possible Fraudulent Acts.

⁶⁶ The term non-state donors refers to individuals, trusts and foundations, and companies

59. Non-State donors and implementing partners must ensure that proper procedures are in place to address incidents of Fraudulent Acts. Non-State donors and implementing partners are also expected to disclose to the Organization any potential conflict of interest, and also disclose if any official or professional under contract with the United Nations may have an interest in or financial tie to the non-State donor organization or implementing partner's business.
60. All agreements with implementing partners should contain appropriate anti-fraud and corruption clauses and clauses stating that they are subject to regular monitoring activities, verifications and external (including forensic) audits for their use of United Nations' funds and sanctions in the case of proven allegations of fraud.
61. Examples of Fraudulent Acts by vendors, non-State donors and implementing partners may include: the forging of documents; making false statements to obtain a financial or other benefit to which the entity is not entitled; offering something of value to improperly influence a procurement process; "collusion" or other anti-competitive scheme between suppliers during a tender process to obtain undue benefits; deliberate substandard compliance with contractual terms; diversion or misappropriation of funds; purported delivery of diverted goods; billing twice or multiple times for the same items or services; falsifying internal records that are used to support claims; failing to report known over payments and credit balances by (to) the Organization, "extortion" or "coercion" (the act of attempting to influence the process of procuring goods, services or works, or executing contracts by means of threats of injury to person, property or reputation), etc.

XI. Reporting to Member States

62. The annex to the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations (ST/SGB/2013/4) "Additional terms of reference governing the audit of the United Nations" entrusts to the Board of Auditors the responsibility of reporting to the General Assembly all cases of fraud or presumptive fraud in the context of its reports to the intergovernmental bodies.
63. OIOS also submits annual reports to the General Assembly on its activities in peacekeeping and regular budget areas, with references to specific investigations of possible misconduct including Fraudulent Acts.
64. In addition, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/63 on "Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission", as well as subsequent resolutions on the same topic, the Secretary-General reports to the General Assembly on an annual basis the number and nature of cases involving credible allegations of criminal conduct against United Nations officials and experts on mission, which have been referred to States of nationality. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 70/114, the Secretary-General's reports also include information on the United Nations entity involved; the type of crime and summary of allegations; and the status of any investigation, prosecutorial and/or disciplinary action taken by national authorities.

65. Finally, cases of misconduct and/or criminal behavior for Secretariat staff members, and the related disciplinary consequences, are made public by the Secretariat on a yearly basis in accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/287, which requested the Secretary-General to ensure that all staff of the Organization are informed of the most common examples of misconduct and/or criminal behavior and their disciplinary consequences, including any legal action, with due regard for the protection of the privacy of the staff member(s) concerned.

Annex I - Relevant sections of United Nations official documentation related to Fraudulent Acts

A. The Charter of the United Nations

1. The Charter of the United Nations is the foundational treaty of the Organization. It establishes, among others, that in the performance of their duties, “the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization”; and also states that they shall “refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization” (Article 100). Furthermore, the Charter states that the “paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity” (Article 101).

B. Oath of Office

2. Every United Nations staff member is called upon by the United Nations Charter to uphold the highest levels of efficiency, competence and integrity. This commitment is reflected in the United Nations’ Oath of Office that every staff member must take when he/she begins his career in the Organization and which reads as follows:

“I solemnly declare and promise to exercise in all loyalty, discretion and conscience the functions entrusted to me as an international civil servant of the United Nations, to discharge these functions and regulate my conduct with the interests of the United Nations only in view, and not to seek or accept instructions in regard to the performance of my duties from any Government or other source external to the Organization.

“I also solemnly declare and promise to respect the obligations incumbent upon me as set out in the Staff Regulations and Rules.”

C. Outside activities

3. Staff Regulation 1.2 (o) establishes that staff members “shall not engage in any outside occupation or employment, whether remunerated or not, without the approval of the Secretary-General.” Staff Rules 1.2 (s) to (v) further establishes policies with regard to which outside activities may be performed by a staff member and under what circumstances. Further elaboration on the internal procedures to follow in regard to these provisions may be found in ST/AI/2000/13 “Outside activities”.

D. Gifts and hospitality

4. Staff Regulations 1.2 (j) and (k) establish that staff members shall not accept any honour, decoration, favour, gift or remuneration from any Government, except in very limited circumstances under which a staff member may receive these on behalf of the Organization. Staff Regulation 1.2 (l) establishes that staff members shall not accept any honour, decoration, favour, gift or remuneration from any non-governmental source without the prior authorization of the Secretary-General. ST/AI/2010/1 “Reporting, retaining and disposing of honours, decorations, favours, gifts or remuneration from governmental and non-governmental sources” provides further elaboration on the processes to follow. Different provisions apply to staff members involved in the procurement process (please refer to Section 4.8 of the United Nations Procurement Manual for guidance).

E. Use of United Nations Emblem

5. The use of the United Nations emblem and name, including any abbreviation thereof, is reserved for the official purposes of the United Nations, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 92(I) of 7 December 1946. That resolution expressly prohibits the use of the United Nations name and emblem in any other way without the express authorization of the Secretary-General, and recommends that Member States take the necessary measures to prevent the use of the United Nations emblem and name without the authorization of the Secretary-General. Article 6 ter of the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property (the “Convention”), revised in Stockholm in 1967, provides trademark protection in respect of the emblems and names of “international organizations” and requires states party to the Convention “to prohibit by appropriate measures the use, without authorization by competent authorities” of the emblems and names of international organizations. Pursuant to the General Assembly resolution 92(I), some Member States have promulgated legislation protecting the United Nations name and emblem, for example in the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. If any entity, outside the United Nations, its Funds and Programmes, or other subsidiary organs, wishes to use the UN emblem and name, it is required to seek prior authorization from the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs.

F. Use of property and assets

6. Staff regulation 1.2 (q) establishes that United Nations assets and property shall be used only for official purposes and with reasonable care. Moreover, Financial Rule 106.7 (a) and (b) authorises the Under-Secretary-General for Management to request any staff member to reimburse the United Nations, either partially or in full, for the loss of assets, including cash, receivables, property, plant and equipment, inventories and intangible assets, if the staff member is responsible for such loss.
7. Further elaboration of the internal procedures related to property and assets of the Organization may be found at ST/AI/2015/4 “Management of property” and ST/AI/97/Rev.2 “Control of United Nations property covered by personal property receipts”.

G. Financial responsibility of staff members for gross negligence

8. Staff Rule 1.7 “Financial responsibility” requests staff members to “exercise reasonable care in any matter affecting the financial interest of the Organization, its physical and human resources, property and assets.” In addition, Staff Rule 10.1 (b) “Misconduct” establishes that where the staff member’s failure to comply with his or her obligations or to observe the standards of conduct expected of an international civil servant is determined by the Secretary-General to constitute misconduct, such staff member may be required to reimburse the Organization, in full or in part, for any financial loss suffered as a result of the staff member’s actions, if such actions are determined to be wilful, reckless or grossly negligent. Under Financial Rule 101.2, “Responsibility and accountability”, any staff member “who contravenes the Financial Regulations and Rules or corresponding administrative instructions may be held personally accountable and financially liable for his or her actions.”

H. Relevant provisions of the United Nations General Conditions of Contract

9. The United Nations General Conditions of Contract, which are to be included as part of all procurement contracts for goods and/or services entered into by the United Nations Secretariat, contain provisions intended to deter fraud, as follows:
 - a) the “Observance of the Law” clause requires contractors to comply with all relevant laws regarding their performance of the contract, and includes an express provision requiring contractors to maintain compliance with all obligations relating to their registration as a qualified vendor of goods or services to the United Nations, as set forth in the United Nations vendor registration procedures;
 - b) the “Officials not to Benefit” clause requires contractors to warrant that they have not, and shall not, offer any United Nations representative, official, employee or agent, a benefit related to the contract, any other contract with the United Nations, the award of such contracts, or for any other purpose intended to gain an advantage for the contractor;
 - c) the “Audits and Investigations” clause includes an obligation on contractors to cooperate with investigations/audits; and
 - d) the “Responsibility for Employees” clause includes a requirement that contractors’ personnel respect local laws and conform to a high standard of moral and ethical conduct.

I. Post-employment restrictions

10. ST/SGB/2006/15 establishes the following restrictions on the post-employment activities of staff members involved in procurement and the sanctions for violations of these restrictions:

- a) For a period of one-year following separation from service, former staff may not seek or accept employment with, or accept any form of compensation or financial benefit from, any vendor which conducts or seeks to conduct business with the UN and with whom such staff member has been personally involved in the procurement process during the last three years of service with the UN.
- b) For a period of two years following separation of service, staff members may not knowingly communicate with, or appear before, any staff member or unit of the Organization on behalf of any third party on any matters that were under their official responsibility relating to the procurement process during the last three years of their UN service.
- c) While in service, staff members may not solicit or accept, directly or indirectly, any promise or offer of future employment from any vendor which conducts, or seeks to conduct, business with the Organization and with whom such staff members have been personally involved in the procurement process during the previous three years of service with the UN.

J. Entities conducting investigations in the United Nations Secretariat

11. OIOS was established to assist the Secretary-General in fulfilling his internal oversight responsibilities, in particular with regard to investigation, inspection and evaluation, monitoring and internal audit.⁶⁷ It is the primary office to investigate high-risk, complex matters and serious criminal cases – including complex fraud and corruption cases - which have been classified by OIOS as “category I” cases. In respect of cases considered lower risk to the Organization – classified by OIOS as “category II” cases⁶⁸ – a number of entities in the Secretariat may conduct investigations and/or administrative inquiries, as described below:

- a) Heads of Department/Office/Mission and Programme Managers: Heads of department or responsible officers shall undertake investigations where there is reason to believe that a staff member has engaged in unsatisfactory conduct for which a disciplinary measure may be imposed⁶⁹.

⁶⁷ General Assembly resolution 48/218/B

⁶⁸ Please refer to the “Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on strengthening the investigation functions in the United Nations” (A/58/708) that describes “category I” and “category II” cases, as classified by OIOS. “Category II” cases are described as being of lower risk to the Organization, including the following: personnel matters, traffic-related inquiries, simple thefts, contract disputes, office management disputes, basic misuse of equipment or staff, basic mismanagement issues, infractions of regulations, rules or administrative issuances and simple entitlement fraud. “Category I” cases are classified as high-risk, complex matters and serious criminal cases, including the following: Serious or complex fraud, other serious criminal act or activity, abuse of authority or staff, conflict of interest, gross mismanagement, waste of substantial resources, cases involving risk of loss of life to staff or to others, substantial violation of UN regulations, rules or administrative issuances, complex proactive investigations aimed at studying and reducing risk to life and/or UN property.

⁶⁹ ST/AI/371 (as amended) “Revised disciplinary measures and procedures”. Paragraph 7 of A/RES/59/287.

- b) Department of Safety and Security: DSS investigative capability rests within the Special Investigative Units at, for example, Headquarters, Offices away from Headquarters and Regional Commissions, which also investigate category II cases.
- c) Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) and Department of Field Support (DFS)⁷⁰:
 - Panels convened by the Heads of Mission: Heads of Missions can undertake investigations where there is reason to believe that a staff member has engaged in unsatisfactory conduct for which a disciplinary measure may be imposed⁷¹.
 - The Special Investigation Unit of the Security Section of Field Missions (“Field Mission SIUs”) is mandated to investigate all category II cases – and other similar allegations – occurring in the missions or referred to missions by OIOS for investigation. Field Mission SIUs can investigate allegations against all personnel of a mission, but they predominantly conduct investigations involving civilian personnel, i.e., staff members, United Nations Volunteers, consultants and independent contractors, employees of United Nations contractors.

K. Other review mechanism

- 12. In addition, the Ethics Office conducts “preliminary reviews” of retaliation complaints to ascertain whether a prima-facie case of retaliation exists. This “preliminary review” is not considered to be an investigation. However, if the Ethics Office finds a prima facie case of retaliation, it then refers the matter to OIOS for a complete investigation⁷².

⁷¹ ST/AI/371 (as amended) “Revised disciplinary measures and procedures”. Paragraph 7 of A/RES/59/287

⁷² ST/SGB/2005/21 “Protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with duly authorized audits or investigations”.

Annex III: Categories of non-United Nations personnel not covered by this framework

A) United Nations Military Experts on Mission

1. United Nations Military Experts on Mission, including Military Observers, Military Advisers and Military Liaison Officers, are recruited as individuals through their Member State which retains disciplinary authority over them. Their duties and obligations are generally defined by a signed undertaking with the United Nations.⁷³ In addition, they are subject to specific United Nations administrative procedures.⁷⁴ Military Experts on Mission are accorded the status of “Expert on Mission” in accordance with the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations.
2. United Nations investigations are conducted by OIOS where instances of serious misconduct arise. Although United Nations Military Experts on Mission are under the disciplinary authority and procedures of the sending State, their signed undertaking outlines the obligation to cooperate fully and actively with an OIOS investigation.

B) United Nations Police Officers

3. United Nations Police officers are recruited as individuals through their Member State which retains disciplinary authority over them. Their duties and obligations are generally defined by a signed undertaking with the United Nations.⁷⁵ In addition, they are subject to specific United Nations administrative procedures.⁷⁶ United Nations Police officers are accorded the status of “Expert on Mission” in accordance with the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations.
4. United Nations investigations are conducted by OIOS where instances of serious misconduct arise. Although United Nations Police officers are under the disciplinary authority and procedures of their sending State, their signed undertaking includes the obligation to cooperate fully and actively with an OIOS investigation.

C) Government Provided Personnel

5. Government-provided personnel (“GPP”) are experts nominated by their national Government for service with United Nations peacekeeping and special political missions. They are recruited as individuals through their Member State which retains disciplinary authority over them. Their duties and obligations are generally defined by a signed undertaking with the United Nations. In addition, they are subject to specific United Nations administrative procedures.⁷⁷ GPP are accorded the status of “Expert on Mission” in accordance with the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations.

6. United Nations investigations are conducted by OIOS where instances of serious misconduct arise. Although GPP are under the disciplinary authority and procedures of their sending State, their signed undertaking includes the obligation to cooperate fully and actively with an OIOS investigation.

D) Formed Police Units

7. Formed Police Units (“FPUs”) are contributed by Member States (“police-contributing country” or “PCC”) at the request of the Secretary-General. Their duties and obligations are set out in a Memorandum of Understanding between the United Nations and the police-contributing country concerned (PCC MOU) and in an undertaking with the United Nations signed by the individual FPU members. In particular, they are governed by the DPKO Guidelines for Formed Police Units with Peace Operations, as well as other administrative rules, regulations, standard operating procedures, policies and directives as issued by the United Nations.
8. United Nations investigations are conducted by OIOS where instances of serious misconduct arise. Although FPUs are under the disciplinary authority and procedures of the PCC, their signed undertaking includes the obligation to cooperate fully and actively with an OIOS investigation.

E) Contingent Personnel

9. Contingent personnel refer to members of national military contingents contributed by Member States (“troop-contributing country” or “TCC”) at the request of the Secretary-General to serve in United Nations peacekeeping operations. Their duties and obligations are set out in the Memorandum of Understanding between the United Nations and the TCC concerned (“TCC MOU”).⁷⁸ In particular, they are governed by the DPKO Guidelines for TCCs Deploying Military Units, the United Nations standards of conduct entitled “We are United Nations Peacekeeping Personnel”, as well as other administrative rules, regulations, standard operating procedures, policies and directives as issued by the United Nations.
10. Under the TCC MOU, the TCC has the primary responsibility to investigate acts of misconduct by members of national contingents, and OIOS’s authority to investigate is limited accordingly. Members of national contingents are subject to the TCC’s exclusive jurisdiction in respect of any disciplinary action and crimes or offences committed by them while they are assigned to a United Nations peacekeeping operation.
